

DELAID STEAL ONLY NEW PLAY

Veteran Dan Brouters Says Baseball is Same Today as of Old.

New York, Nov. 14.—The recent demise of the season of 1908 proved conclusively that the game of baseball is very nearly perfect. The only new play was that perpetrated by Fred Merkle of the Chicago Cubs. It is pretty hard to tell which should take the blame. That was won up very quickly, however, for hereafter managers will undoubtedly see that all aspiring base runners touch second, whether the game is a cinch or not.

With the exception of the "delayed steal" there has been no new play in baseball for the past ten years, according to Dan Brouters, the veteran player and scout. The scout, the famous Yale pitcher, declares that it was used by the Yale team when he was the leading pitcher for the collegians.

The delayed steal is generally attributed to the inventive mind of Sammy Strang, who was a member of the Giants. Norman Eberfeld of the Highlanders took advantage of it immediately, and many claim that he devised the play. McGraw says, however, that Strang invented the play, and most of the players agree with him.

Is a Surprising Play.

The delayed steal is one of the most surprising things in baseball. It has always been customary for the runner on first to start for second, in a steal, the minute the pitcher started to throw to the plate. Strang discovered that by waiting a minute before starting the team would not be expected to start for second, in a steal, the minute the pitcher started to throw to the plate. Strang discovered that by waiting a minute before starting the team would not be expected to start for second, in a steal, the minute the pitcher started to throw to the plate.

The bunt, the double steal, the hit and run, and all scientific plays of that nature were used years ago. The Baltimore Orioles, the Boston Red Sox, and John W. Weaver insist that they were in vogue prior to Hanlon's management of the Orioles.

The spit ball is only five years old, but it is not a play, it is a curve ball, by the pitcher and cannot be considered as a play.

BIG OFFER FOR PACER

Minnesota Man Seeks Minor Her as Successor to Dan Patch, Now Getting Old.

BY HENRY TEN EYCK WHITE.

Harry C. Hersey, superintendent of the Savage stock farm near Minneapolis, Minn., where Dan Patch, Director and other stallions are owned, came to Chicago last Friday to try and buy the pacer Minor Her, 1:59 1/4. Hersey went to the Dean farm at Palatine, where Minor Her is being wintered. Inspected the horse, found him sound as a dollar and in the best of health, and then offered $40,000 for the son of Her at Law just as he stood. Although it was a record price for a pacing stallion of his age and limited turf experience, it was declined with thanks, as the owner of the pacer, P. C. Isaacs of Stoughton, Pa., had been approached during the season by others desirous of buying the pacer and had told Dean not to sell.

While Hersey did not say for what purpose the horse was wanted, the supposition is that he was after an exhibit to show to take the place of Dan Patch, now 12 years old, and for use as a sire on the Dan Patch filly owned by the Savage farm.

PUGS HAVE NEW CENTER.

Pittsburg Is Out to Boost Fight Game.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 14.—Boxing here will undoubtedly be put on a firm basis by the new club, the National A. C., which opens its doors for the first time. Prominent business men of the city are backing the enterprise, and Pittsburg boxing fans confidently predict that their new club will be on as firm a financial basis as any other in the country. The plans of the building have already been submitted to the authorities and the club has been granted a license to hold exhibitions. The arena has seating capacity of 1,000, and the management intends to have every chair reserved. Fortnightly shows are the proposed plan of the entertainment, and only boxers of recognized ability will be engaged. All in all, the outlook for six-round bouts in Pittsburg is decidedly rosy at the present time, and great delight in the fist line are anxiously awaited by the boxing enthusiasts.
